

Ladies and gentlemen,

what a wonderful evening. I am so thankful for your support. Without your votes I wouldn't stand here in front of you, as the first female president of the United States of America. Today we're writing history. Although not all of you voted for me, I want to give my best for the whole America, our country. I am so thankful that you give me your trust to lead this country the right way although there isn't a right way for all of us. There is going to be brightness as well as darkness. There are going to be good days as well as bad days. But together we can handle it all. I am honoured to be able to achieve great things for this country in the next four years. So, I want to tell you a little story. Let's imagine:

Everybody is free. Everybody has the same chances. Everybody is equal. Everyone can reach everything if he works hard. Everyone has access to prosperity and success. From rags to riches. All that is what the American dream means. James Truslow Adams said in 1931: "Life should be better and richer and fuller for everyone, with opportunity for each according to ability or achievement."

But what is the situation today? What if you get ill and aren't able to work hard for your dream anymore? What if you suffocate from all the medical bills and your livelihood is pulled from under your feet? There's no way to escape this horrible nightmare. As you can see especially in the Corona crisis it can happen very quickly that you get sick and have to rely on medical support. The problem is that most people have to pay medical bills on their own. It mustn't be that Americans rush into lifelong debt only to pay their hospital bills. Only to pay for being healthy. Only to pay for being able to survive... It's paradoxical. The people are losing their livelihood just to survive. That's NOT what the American Dream means. That's NOT why all the people came to America in the hope of starting a new, a better, an independent life. I want to change our healthcare system. I don't want, that innocent people lose their chance for the American dream, because of an accident or an illness anymore. My goal is to give all people safety. That they no longer have to fear anymore.

But let's not only cure our bodies, let's help to cure the whole world. Corona is taking away the breath from all of us. But what if our planet isn't able to breath anymore?

Nowadays climate change is becoming a more and more important subject, mainly to young Americans. And that's why I care. If we would consider the scientific consensus, we would install sidewalks everywhere, so we wouldn't have to take a ride to get to the bakery. We would transform our existence threatening cities into greening utopias. We would improve our public transport systems and make it more affordable. We would start campaigns to elucidate the young generation and everyone who doesn't have a clue, what I am talking about right now. We would invest in climate-neutral technologies. We would try to be a good example of how to care about our environment and by that about us and the coming generations. At the same time, we would show that these values do not necessarily mean to renounce strictly, but also to gain immensely concerning our quality of life. Just like the first colonialists, we would be aware of our power to change the rest of the world for the better by our influence and our example.

Slowly but steady, I see gloomy clouds looming at the horizon. Our planet won't be capable to bear our lifestyle any longer. Right now, we - the United States of America - we would need five planets to sustain our - the American way of life. It is overconfident, to think that someone would come and just solve all of the problems piling up caused by that blindness. We don't want to see the coincidence between excessive nature catastrophes around the world and our consumerism - the one of the industrial countries. But it is time to overcome our defiance, our fear and our ignorance. Human beings like you and me are suffering hunger, uncertainty and rootlessness. It is time to act. It is time to carry our ancestors' values forward. What values? - you ask. The value of peace. America did fight for this value several times before. Peace. Democracy. Today we should take notice of the fact that wars are going to be fought over water. Isn't water an unlimited resource? It won't be, if we continue to waste it thoughtless. The time has come to prevent any more harm. We are going to fight for peace and democracy and humanity. But differently this time. Are you ready for action?

I will be honoured to be the one, leading a modern-minded, prospective and caring America into this bright future, full of regard, caution and sustainability. The American Dream will be made possible again for future mortals. I will consult the ministers and make every effort to help make this vision come true. The vision of this world with a tomorrow and endless ones to come.

But not everyone can hope for a promising future. Since the beginning of the 21st century many people, simply not average or a denied group of individuals has to fear public violence - verbal or physical.

Racism has been a big topic in our country for many years now. And I don't like to say that it still plays a big role in our lives, but sadly, this is the truth. People express hate towards others who don't look like them, or weren't born in the same country. But I think that, instead of just looking at the negative aspects of this topic, let's look at it from a different point of view. Let us focus on how much the black community has already accomplished, and how they fought for their rights in the past and were so successful. Let us remember the big moments: When Rosa Parks refused to give that seat to the white man, when Martin Luther King's speech served as a defining moment for the civil rights movement, and so on. All these people have fought for their rights with their lives, and when you compare their situation back then to the current situation, you can see what they have accomplished. Sure, we are not yet where we want to be. But together, we can accomplish so much more, and we won't give up until every single black citizen in this country feels like they are treated equally. The government will do anything that is possible to fight against racism. Right now, it is more important than ever to remove the remaining structures of racial segregation that have plagued our country for so many years. Now, that more and more immigrants search for shelter and safety in our country, we have to give them a feeling of security and we have to welcome them with open arms. Only by focusing on the future and letting go of the separation that dominated our past, we can create a new world order, where every single human being feels like they are equally worthy.

Equality is also depending on economy. A subject that shaped the United States throughout history. Economy is the key to prosperity. I want the highest possible amount of people to have a more than acceptable standard of living.

Contrariwise, the current economic situation is quite fragile and yields are decreasing. The skyscraper of our economy is nearly collapsing under the weight of a threatening inflation. Big companies did profit from past reforms concerning taxation, but the small businesses were confronted with more disposals than they could stem by themselves. Another negative aspect to those reforms is that the government gets fewer taxes. But it needs this money to care for its citizens, especially in corona-times.

Washington is normally not interfering due to the American mentality: "From rags to riches." I do admire this mindset, which depicts wealth as something everyone can achieve by working hard enough.

But the pandemic is weakening our economy, the heart of the American Dream.

Now the moment has come when we, the government of the United States of America have to establish profound changes and the people have to step forward with us. Washington is going to set the frame or give impulses as a stakeholder. We want to prevent a drastic economic disequilibrium. That's why the taxation for example has to reflect the individual capabilities, so we can support the weak ones. We need to act more social. And no more extra rules for external investors and companies.

One possibility for the government consists in giving temporary help. Credits. Becoming a co-owner. You name it. It is in our all interest to prevent businesses from the minus. I'm going to work with my competent consultants on a "Corona aid kit" for everyone, even though the dimension of the companies has to be considered.

An alternative help can include doing essential eco-friendly investments in economic areas, for instance to improve the ailing water, electricity or gas infrastructure. We need a good base for national trade. (Remember the investment of ...)

Let's not forget about the numerous unemployed people out there. We need a system that prevents people to go to rack and ruin. Governmental creation of jobs could be a helping action.

Planning has to be done now, so that we are going to be ready by 2026, when the relevant laws are going to be alterable.

Debts are going to be made, but on the long term it will pay us well, believe me.

An important question, we need to ask ourselves is: Quando vais, American economy? - whether we want a free or regulated market, which always takes account of national interests.

The most important aspect to this resolution is: Together. All for one and one for all.

So, let's remember the American Dream and make it more real than ever, with the help of every single one. Everybody of you is important for our country, for our common dream, no matter what skin colour you have, where you are from, in which job you work, if you are female or male, homosexual, or have another religion, it doesn't matter, because we need all of you to fulfil our common dream.

"Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free." I think you all know this sentence, because it has meant so much for our country. It means that everybody has the possibility to achieve and to fulfil his dreams, if he really wants to. Everyone is welcome. I think this is what our country is made of and what distinguishes it.

But the latest immigration policies changed our country and butted our actual dream far away from us. Because the immigrants didn't get accepted or welcomed, unfortunately it was quite the contrary. Immigrants were mistreated by separating children from their families and restricting travel and visas from certain countries. But as you all know, we have the largest immigration population in comparison to every other country, which is why this topic has such an importance. And I am sure, that most of you have roots from other countries, so your great-great-grandparents were surely immigrants, too. But imagine, how it would have felt for you if they had been separated from their family many years ago. Would you still support these policies? Would you think it's human, what they are going through? Surely not.

I want our previous dream of immigration back. I want it back and I want to expand it. I want you to see, that immigrants are very important for our country and that there are a lot of advantages to immigration. We want to use these advantages. We have the possibility to get into an exchange of knowledge, whereby we come across new ideas, new methods and new technology, which supports our economy. But to reach this aim, we have to give them a chance, so we can fulfil our common dream together. So, we are again able to identify our country with the sentence, "Give me your tired, your poor, your huddled masses yearning to breathe free," and learn human behaviour again. Because that is, what we are made of.

But immigration is not the only topic, where humanity plays a major role... also the latest gun incidents show, that something has to get changed. Because day after day there are people suffering from shootings. It might be no big news, but it is the innocent, who are the biggest group of getting shot, of getting killed. We have lost control over our gun culture and over safety.

A proper way of dealing with guns has not arrived in our present. It has to change! Safety for each and every one is what I want to achieve.

Therefore we, all of us, have to bear responsibility for the safety of ourselves, our children, our family and loved ones. I want to get rid of these problems emanating from our gun policy, so that there are no more days where you as parents are waiting for your children to come home safe from school. Where you are waiting not to be called by your children, telling you there is a shooting at school and where your children don't have to suffer from hyper realistic shooting drills and the fear of dying every single day.

The laws have to change towards this safety, the safety we all want for our beloved ones.

... my little story comes finally to an end. But as you might have noticed, I've talked about lots of problems in our country, which have to get solved and removed, so we have the possibility to go on. But I want you to know, that none of these issues is more important than the others. They are all of the same importance. But to remove all of these obstacles I need the help and the support of every one of you.

The election was just the beginning. Now WE make our American dream great again. Together. Hand in hand.

I am so thankful, that you give me the chance and your trust to fulfil our dream. Thank you. I will try everything not to disappoint you and I'm sure you won't disappoint me.
